GRADY'S GIFT - BY KERI MULLENNIX

After nearly 3 years of countless doctor appointments, testing, 2 failed IUI's and an unsuccessful round of IVE, we conceived our precious Grady. My husband, Chris and I were filled with the incredible joy of experiencing pregnancy with our "Little P-Nut." Our 36 week appointment showed that Grady's growth had begun to slow and our doctors decided that it would be best to go ahead and induce the next week. At our final doctor's appointment, the day prior to his scheduled entrance into the world, we received the devastating news that he no longer had a heartbeat. He was gone, and I had just felt him move the evening prior. Grady was born still and silent into the world on February 24, 2017. His unexplained passing was traumatic and heartbreaking. However the 37 weeks he lived next to my heart was nothing short of a miracle.

In the weeks following Grady's passing, I was given several pieces of jewelry in his memory. It was important for me to have something with me at all times as a reminder of him, not only for myself but for the world to see. My worst fear was, and still is, for my child to be forgotten. After about 5 months into my grief, I began creating jewelry pieces for myself and my family to wear. I have a strong desire to share this with other bereaved families; to give them a reminder of their children and to let them know that they are not walking this path alone. We can all find a way to eventually begin to heal and take steps to move forward in the cycles of grief. To share God's love, hope, encouragement and healing through life's most trying storms: This is Grady's Gift.

PARTNERS WITH CARTER'S

We rely on donations to offer beautiful clothing, blankets and wraps of all sizes for families experiencing the unexpected and devastating loss of a baby. The clothing and blankets become treasured keepsakes for parents as they create memories with their babies. Carter's, the leading brand of children's clothing, gifts and accessories in America, has generously provided preemie clothing and receiving blankets for our program. This donation from Carter's will enable us to comfortably supply families with a special outfit that their baby can wear as precious memories are made.

In addition, Carter's also supports our NICU with donations of preemie clothing and is a sponsor of Miracle Babies, a program run through the Northside Hospital Foundation, which provides resources and financial assistance to families with critically ill newborns in our NICU.

We are grateful to Carter's for their compassionate support of this community!

MY VANISHING TWIN

Submitted by Melissa Kelly, member of Butterfly M.O.M.s (Missing Our Multiples), our social and support group for parents raising surviving multiples.

I will never forget the moment we found out we were having twins. My husband joked about having twins prior to our appointment (they run in my family) but I brushed it off. As I lay there watching our sweet baby for the first time on the monitor I jokingly proclaimed see I told you there's only one! And not even a moment later the nurse replies, no there's not and all of a sudden two little babies appeared. It was the purest most beautiful, unexpected moment in my life.

When we got home we began researching twins. I mean who doesn't want to know if they are secretly high functioning and communicating? But with all that joy we also came across the term "vanishing twin." The doctor never mentioned it and while we found the idea of one of the twins just "vanishing" out of nowhere horrifying we pushed it to the back of our minds and made our motto full throttle to happiness and focused on the joy of the present moment.

We saw our babies with strong, beautiful heartbeats twice. On our third visit we expected nothing less. I remember seeing the monitor and seeing two babies and I secretly felt a huge sigh of relief no one vanished. But although no one vanished, one did not have a heartbeat.

It was the most confusing and painful time of our lives. I never even heard of vanishing twin or twinless twin up until my pregnancy and now that's going to be part of my life? The truth is, vanishing twin effects a quarter of all twin pregnancies. It occurs when one twin miscarries and then is reabsorbed by the other twin, mother, or placenta giving the appearance of vanishing. (American Pregnancy Association).

We found out the day before we were going to tell the world but how do you tell your friends and parents well, we lost one baby but we have another in there! And like us people didn't know what to say. They attempted to help by telling us to focus on the one baby or I couldn't allow myself to be upset because it wouldn't be good for the other baby. It felt like limbo. I didn't feel like I could mourn or be as happy as I was.

Every visit thereafter I expected to only see baby B but nope, my sweet baby A was still there. My twin did not vanish until 20 weeks. Every appointment there was joy and grief. Some appointments I wished the baby would just vanish so I could move on then I would feel bad for wishing such a thing and other appointments I felt so grateful I still had him in some way. When baby A finally vanished it felt like the moment I was told there wasn't a heartbeat all over again. A second round of overwhelming grief that Google didn't warm me about hit.

I struggled with my secrecy of my miscarriage. I placed judgement on myself. I remember thinking it's just a miscarriage you are making a big deal out of nothing. Your doctor, your church, your peers don't even think it's a big deal. I told myself don't make it weird or upset other people. I told myself I needed to be happy because at least I still had one.

But that wasn't my truth. I was allowing people I didn't even know to judge and dictate my grief.

Then, one day I realized I could hold two truths. I didn't need others acceptance I only needed my own on this journey. I could mourn AND be happy simultaneously without guilt. I did nothing wrong. I loved both my babies. When the conversation was appropriate I began talking openly about the happiness I did feel. It didn't have to be doom and gloom. There was joy to be remembered and dang it if anything I want to remember the joy over the pain. Don't get me wrong I still cry. But now, I allow myself to "ride the wave of emotion" if it comes I'm not going to push it away like I did, I'm not going to shame myself for loving. I allow the emotions to happen without judgment. And honestly, this was a huge step in my grief process. Once I allowed this to happen I named my lost baby. It was so impersonal calling him A which my doctors and I did throughout the pregnancy. We finally named the baby, Gabriel. All of a sudden Gabriel became more "tangible." I can't describe it but it solidified that he was a person and not an object that had to be talked about in past tense!

When we named Gabriel it became easier to mourn an actual person. My husband, baby and I now celebrate Gabriel on the day we found out we would no longer be a family of 4. It was a sad day, the saddest day of our life. But now, it's a very calm and peaceful day. Each year, I pick up flowers and we one by one toss them into a stream and watch them until we can no longer see them. And then to allow my son to honor his sibling we give him balloons and let him release it (minus this year because he wanted the "ball.") This small ritual honored my

DAVITA KIDNEY CARE SUPPORTS LOVE'S FOUNDATION

Founded in 2014 by Jennifer Speed in memory of her daughter, Love Speed, Love's Foundation was created to provide financial assistance to families as they make final arrangements for their babies. On February 6, 2018 DaVita Kidney Care presented Jennifer Speed of Love's Foundation with a donation of $6,500 to support our families.

My daughter, Love Speed, was born on March 23, 2014. Her timely birth was greatly anticipated by not only me but by her father, Scott, and older sister. Needless to say, we were all devastated with her premature delivery. She only lived for shortly over an hour and my life was forever changed.

Shortly after returning home from the hospital I shared with Scott that I wanted to do something for other families who will unfortunately have to endure such a tragic loss. I felt an overwhelming need to not only help other families but to make a purpose out of the birth of Love as well. It was very important to me, and still is, that Love's brief time on this earth impacted someone else's life.

Hence, Love's Foundation was born. The foundation is a 501(C)3 non-profit that helps financially assist families with making final arrangements for their baby who passed away due to premature birth, stillbirth or complications at birth. To date the foundation has assisted 30 families. Each and every family is brought back to life through the assistance of the foundation. Make a difference in the lives of families who have lost a child.

CROCHETED WITH LOVE

Miss Florence is a mother, grandmother, and great-grandmother, having recently welcomed her eighth great-grandchild into the world.

She has always loved helping people. She spent many years teaching Sunday school, bringing vesper services to elderly residents in assisted living, and working with 1st-5th grades students in elementary school as a volunteer teaching assistant.

After learning to sew her own clothes at the age of 12, Miss Florence began to crochet. She taught herself from a book at the age of 14. She has made numerous afghans and throws for family and friends over the years.

She is still a busy lady at the age of 94. Most recently she started crocheting baby blankets for Perinatal Loss at Northside. In 2004, on Christmas Day, her second great-grandchild was stillborn. She remembered the kind and thoughtful gifts given by others to her granddaughter, and she decided that she would like to do that for others. She has donated over forty blankets, and currently has 5 more ready to deliver. These items are dedicated to the memory of Emmie Jane, along with a meaningful Bible verse. One of her favorites is – “He will wipe every tear from their eyes. There will be no more death or mourning or crying or pain.” Rev. 21:4

NORTHSIDE HOSPITAL H.E.A.R.T.STRINGS MEMORIAL SERVICE

We are aware of how important it is to remember your baby and how healing rituals can be to the wounded hearts of those who grieve. For this reason, the H.E.A.R.T.strings office joins the Northside Hospital chaplains as they sponsor a memorial service on the first Sunday in May and the first Sunday in November to honor the memory of the babies for whom we have cared and who have died during the previous six months. Our service is a non-sectarian candle-lighting service with music, poems, and readings and is held at the Northside Hospital Atlanta campus.

This ceremony offers the opportunity to have a special time of dedication and reflection. Babies will be honored by having their names read during the service. Parents are encouraged to bring a flower to be incorporated into an arrangement as a part of the ceremony. A reception with refreshments will follow the ceremony.

If you have not received an invitation and would like to attend, please call 404-851-8754.

ONE-ON-ONE GRIEF SUPPORT

Available through the new H.E.A.R.T.strings Companions Program

Do you feel that personal, one-on-one mentorship would benefit you in your grief journey? This new program matches trained volunteer mentors who have experienced the loss of a baby, with bereaved parents for personal, one-on-one support and companionship. H.E.A.R.T.strings will seek to match people with similar experiences when possible, and will monitor the matches to make sure both parties are comfortable.

If you are interested in being matched with a mentor, please contact us at northsidepnl@gmail.com or call 404-851-8177.

We know that one of the hardest things facing you after you have suffered the loss of your baby is the thought of coming back into the hospital. If it would help to meet someone from our office to take you into the building and to re-visit areas where you may have stayed, we would be honored to do so. We can do as much or as little as you desire – you set the parameters. Contact us if you would like to set up a time.

Dear Cameron, I saw you again today
The visions in my head just never go away
Of holding you swaddled up next to my heart
Where the love for my baby grew right from the start.

I never imagined when I entered that day
Hand in hand with your Daddy on your birthday
That I'd walk through those doors with you kicking inside
Then leave in a wheelchair, empty arms by my side.

The numbness set in, with no answers to find
How could I walk away and just leave you behind?
The words that they offered were kind and sincere,
But they'd never replace the emptiness I feared.

I held you for hours, the tears fell like rain
And in the blink of an eye, life would never be the same
The years just keep passing; so much has changed
But our baby lives forever in the memories that remain.

Sometimes I look up at the stars in the sky
And I sit there in wonder, still asking Him, "Why?"
Then I hear the sweet voice of your sister, age 7
"It's o.k. Mama; God must have needed more angels in Heaven."

They never got to meet you, or hold your sweet hand
You'll never get to help them build castles in the sand
But you're with them and they know you through the keepsakes that we've shared
And in their hearts is where they hold you; they'll always keep you there.

Now I walk in your honor, surrounded by others
With Daddies and Siblings and still grieving Mothers
As we gather together, a few tell their story
While I just sit in my silence still guarding your memory

I know that you're with me; you're not just a façade
For your tombstone reads "Born into the Arms of God."
From my arms to His, as you peacefully flew
You carried my heart and my love there with you.

As the butterfly flutters, it has new meaning now
One that brings comfort and peace somehow
As a symbol that your life, although short, never ends

THANK YOU FOR YOUR SUPPORT!
